The Royal Family and Religion

Exhibition within the context of the 450th anniversary of the Heidelberg Catechism, 1563-2013

In 2013 Paleis Het Loo is mounting the exhibition 'The Royal family and religion' to illustrate the ties between the House of Orange-Nassau and different religious faiths. Precious bibles and personal hymnals from the royal collections reflect the role that religion played in the daily lives of the members of the royal family. The exhibition is being mounted in cooperation with Stichting Refo500 and three German institutions.

Frederick III of the Palatinate had commissioned the drafting of the Heidelberg Catechism. In 1563, the written confession is published with 129 questions and answers, and becomes an enormous success, such that by 1585 it had appeared in 60 editions. The Dutch version was first published in 1566.
